Dear Sir / Madam,

We present to you the ninth edition of our Software Licensing Bulletin, which highlights some footnotes on Visual Studio:

Visual Studio

- The Visual Studio Enterprise MSDN users receive one copy of Office ProPlus 2016 for production use. Desktop or server OS benefit of MSDN can be used if that desktop is used for development and testing purposes exclusively. Mixed mode use of the desktop for email/browsing internet is not allowed.
- Visual Studio Community 2015 has the same features as Visual Studio Professional 2015 and is free of cost for the following groups:
  1. Individual developers
  2. Classroom learning
  3. Team of 5 users in a non-enterprise organisation (having <250 PCs and <$USD1 million)
- Its express edition is free but requires online registration after 30 days.
- A Visual Studio Developer license is a user-based license and can be reassigned every 90 days to another developer/tester. These developers need to be registered in the MSDN portal. Any IT users who access MSDN software also need a MSDN subscription and should be enrolled in the MSDN portal.

We hope the bulletin was informative. We would be happy to arrange for any additional information that you may require on the subject. Please write to us at in-fmkpmgccsbulletin@kpmg.com for any queries or feedback.

Regards,
